

LES ALLÉES DE CANTEMERLE

2001

With well-developed aromas of pepper and leather this wine shows a distinctly different character from its predecessor, demonstrating how much vintage plays a role in Cantemerle's terroir. Its firmness and density owe much to a high percentage of Cabernets, which contribute both length and elegance. This wine will reach its full potential with several more years of aging, but already displays fine aromas and an attractively elegant composition.

Vineyard, Culture And Harvest

This second wine comes mainly from the château's young vines, and is made like its elder brother. Les Allées de Cantemerle has the same personality as the grand vin, but a shorter ageing potential. As it ages more quickly, Les Allées de Cantemerle is generally ready to be consumed within several years of the vintage.
